On October 15, 1855, the school opened its doors to its first class. Three students showed up, a number that gradually grew to 65 by 1858. In 1859, Anthony Maraschi, S.J., the founding president of St. Ignatius Academy, incorporated the institution under California state law, obtained a charter to issue college degrees, formed a board of trustees, and renamed the institution St. Ignatius College. Student enrollment, composed largely of first- and second-generation Irish and Italian immigrants, increased to 457 by 1862.

Further growth in the number of students and rising property taxes prompted St. Ignatius Church and College to move in 1880 to the corner of Hayes Street and Van Ness Avenue, the current site of the Louise M. Davies Symphony Hall. The college opened its doors to 650 students and rave reviews in the local press. The institution occupied a full city block and was described as having "scientific laboratories and departments" as "thoroughly equipped as money can make them" and a library that contained "the cream of knowledge on all necessary subjects." The attached church was described as "magnificent" and could hold up to 4,000 people. In 1903, the college added a "splendid new gymnasium," described as the best in the city.

The history of St. Ignatius Church and College at this location came to an abrupt end on April 18, 1906. On the morning of that day, an earthquake, followed by several days of fire, brought the church and college, and most of San Francisco, to almost complete ruin. The city and the institution, however, quickly rebuilt from the devastation. In September 1906, St. Ignatius Church and School reopened in temporary quarters, known as the "shirt factory," on the southwest corner of Hayes and Shrader streets, currently the site of one of the buildings of St Mary's Medical Center. In 1927, St. Ignatius College moved into its new Liberal Arts Building, the present Kalmanovitz Hall, near the corner of Fulton and Parker Streets. In 1930, at the request of several alumni groups, St. Ignatius College changed its name to the University of San Francisco.

For 160 years, the University of San Francisco has served the citizens of San Francisco and enriched the lives of thousands of people. The institution has graduated students who went on to become leaders in government, education, business, journalism, sports, the sciences, nursing and health care, and the legal and medical professions. Among its alumni, the university counts three San Francisco mayors, a United States Senator, four California Supreme Court Justices, a California Lieutenant Governor, two Pulitzer Prize winners, three Olympic medalists, several professional athletes, and the former president of Peru. Today the University of San Francisco enrolls more than 10,000 students in its five schools and colleges: The School of Law, founded in 1912; the College of Arts and Sciences, organized in 1925; the School of Management, which began in 1925 as the College of Commerce and Finance and was merged with the College of Professional Studies in 2009; the School of Education, which started as the Department of Education in 1947 and was upgraded to a school in 1972; and the School of Nursing and Health Professions, which began as the Department of Nursing in 1948 and became a school in 1954. USF is one of the most ethnically diverse universities in the nation. Among the entire fall 2014 student population, 47 percent were Asian, African-American, Latino, Native Hawaiian/Pacific Islander, or Native American, and 16 percent were international. In 1964, USF became completely coeducational, though women had been enrolled in the evening programs in law and business since 1927, in education since 1947, and in nursing since 1948. In the fall of 2014, 63 percent of the overall student population were female.

Central to the mission of the University of San Francisco is the preparation of men and women to shape a multicultural world with generosity, compassion, and justice. The institution’s Vision, Mission, and Values Statement, approved by the Board of Trustees on September 11, 2001, after a year of formulation and campus-wide participation, captures the essence of this commitment in its opening paragraph: “The University of San Francisco will be internationally recognized as a premier Jesuit Catholic, urban University with a global perspective that educates leaders who will fashion a more humane and just world.” This mission permeates all aspects of the institution, including student learning and faculty development, curriculum design, program and degree offerings, alumni relations, publications, and a host of other institutional features.

In 2005, the University of San Francisco celebrated the 150th anniversary of its founding. The main USF campus currently occupies 55 acres near Golden Gate Park in San Francisco. In addition, the university offers classes at four Northern California branch campuses (Sacramento, San Jose, Santa Rosa and Pleasanton), at a Southern California branch campus, and at locations in downtown San Francisco, including the Folger Building at 101 Howard Street and at the Presidio. The schools and colleges comprising the institution also offer students a multitude of international experiences and study-abroad programs that enrich the learning community and fulfill the university’s mission. The institution has grown dramatically since its modest beginning. It continues, however, to fulfill a mission that stretches back in time to the founding of the Society of Jesus in 1540 by St. Ignatius of Loyola, that took root in San Francisco in 1855, and that flourishes today in a premier Jesuit Catholic University.
Full Name of Institution: University of San Francisco

Address: 2130 Fulton Street, San Francisco, CA 94117-1080

Web Site Address: www.usfca.edu

General Information Phone Number: 415-422-5555

President: Paul J. Fitzgerald, S.J.

Provost: Jennifer E. Turpin

Sponsorship and Control: USF is an independent, private, non-profit institution of higher education governed by a 41-member Board of Trustees. It is one of the 28 Jesuit Catholic colleges and universities in the United States.

Founding and Charter: USF was founded in 1855 and was granted a charter by the State of California to issue college degrees in 1859.

Accreditation: The University of San Francisco is accredited by the Western Association of Schools and Colleges (WASC), an accreditation first granted in 1950 by the Western College Association (WCA), the antecedent of WASC. In 2010, WASC reaffirmed USF’s accreditation for 9 years. WASC is now known asWSCUC.

USF is also accredited by several professional accrediting bodies, including, but not limited to, the American Bar Association (ABA), the California Commission on Teacher Credentialing, AACSB International–The Association to Advance Collegiate Schools of Business, the Commission on Collegiate Nursing Education (CCNE), the National Association of Schools of Public Affairs and Administration (NASPAA), and the Council on Education for Public Health (CEPH).

Classification by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching: USF is classified as a Doctoral/Research and Community Engaged University.

Under the Carnegie Foundation classification system, USF is characterized as balancing arts, sciences, and the professions at the undergraduate level; as doctoral/professional dominant at the graduate level; with the majority of its students being undergraduates; as selective, with a high level of transfer-in students; and as a medium-sized, four-year, and primarily residential institution. In 2006, USF received the community engagement classification in both possible categories, curriculum engagement and outreach and partnership. This classification was renewed in 2015 for 10 years.

Electronic Resources: 360,247
(includes eBooks, eJournals, Reference Databases)

Total operating base budget (FY 2014): $385,742,000
Total endowment (as of May 31, 2014): $276,943,548
Recent capital campaign goal (ended June 2007): $175,000,000
Total received in capital campaign: $178,410,357
In December 2014, Thomas E. Malloy, class of 1961 and Chairman of the USF Board of Trustees, and his wife, Sharron Malloy, pledged $5 million to support USF’s legendary basketball program as part of a planned athletics capital campaign. The gift is part of a university-wide comprehensive campaign currently in its quiet phase.

In 2013-14, the USF’s Men’s Basketball team had its best season since 1981-82, winning 21 of 33 games and scoring an invitation to post-season play in the National Invitation Tournament (NIT) in March. The team tied for second in the West Coast Conference (WCC), winning 13 of 18 WCC games. Head Coach Rex Walters was named the WCC’s Coach of the Year, making him the first USF Men’s Basketball coach to win the title since Pete Barry in 1980-81. Cole Dickerson ’14, a forward who led the team in scoring and rebounding, was named to the 2014 All-WCC first team for the second consecutive year. Teammates Kruize Pinkins ’15 and Avry Holmes ’16 received honorable mentions.

The women’s cross country team won its fifth consecutive West Coast Conference championship in November 2013, and was ranked 17th in the nation.

During the 2013-14 academic year, USF student-athletes performed 1,635.5 hours of community service.

The USF baseball program has produced four first round draft selections since 2007, including Bradley Zimmer who was picked by the Cleveland Indians in the first round MLB draft in 2014, and his brother, Kyle Zimmer, who was chosen by the Kansas City Royals in the first round of the draft in 2013.

In the fall of 2014, there were 199 student-athletes at USF, 155 of whom had full or partial athletic scholarships.

Among the student-athletes, 114 were men (82 of whom had scholarships), and 85 were women (73 of whom had scholarships).

- The University of San Francisco’s NCAA Division I teams include men’s basketball, soccer, baseball, golf, tennis, track, and cross-country, and women’s basketball, cross-country, golf, soccer, tennis, volleyball, sand volleyball, and track.

- USF NCAA Division I teams have won eight national championships since 1949, including four in men’s soccer, three in men’s basketball, and one in men’s tennis. NCAA individual championships were also won in fencing and in tennis.

- The men’s basketball team has won 15 West Coast Conference titles since 1949.

- The men’s soccer team has won 35 West Coast Conference titles since 1948.

- From 1987 to 2000, the women’s basketball team won three West Coast Conference titles, secured three NCAA tournament berths, and had one Sweet Sixteen appearance.

- Sixteen former USF baseball players have made it to the major leagues since 1911.

- USF Dons have been in the Olympics 22 times, including once in the Winter Olympics.

- Former USF soccer star Anthony Medina, class of 2001, was the only member of the San Diego Sockers who played in all 48 consecutive victories, when that professional team set a new all-time sports record for professional team consecutive wins.
Key Events in 2014

March 7
The first in a series of Mayoral Community Stakeholders Forums was held on the USF Campus. Forums will be held throughout the city to highlight the challenges facing San Francisco, including health care, diversity, innovation, venture capital, technology, and jobs.

April 8
The USF Board of Trustees voted unanimously to appoint Paul J. Fitzgerald, S.J., as the 28th president of the University of San Francisco, effective August 1, 2014. Fr. Fitzgerald grew up in Los Gatos, California, and worked in higher education for more than 20 years before accepting the USF presidency. He previously served as senior associate dean for the College of Arts and Sciences at Santa Clara University, and as senior vice president for academic affairs at Fairfield University in Connecticut, among other positions. Fr. Fitzgerald has lived, taught, and studied overseas; earned six graduate degrees from institutions in Germany, France, and the United States; and taught in China and in Kenya.

May 15-17
USF honored the achievements of 2,177 graduates at its May commencement. The College of Arts and Sciences graduation featured Norman Mineta, former Secretary of Transportation, and Sandy Close, executive editor and director of New America Media/Pacific News Service, both of whom spoke and received honorary degrees. The School of Nursing and Health Professions invited Dr. Margaret Tempero, professor of medicine at UCSF and deputy director of the UCSF Helen Diller Family Comprehensive Center, to give the commencement address. The School of Education heard from Carl A. Grant, the Hoefs-Bascom professor of teacher education at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, who also received an honorary degree. The School of Management featured Claudio Chiuichiarelli, managing partner of Banyan Securities Company and chair emeritus of the USF Board of Trustees, and Joseph Mandato, Managing Director and General Partner of DeNovo Ventures, both of whom received honorary degrees and spoke. The Honorable John Victor Ross, former U.S. Ambassador to Japan, addressed the School of Law graduates and received an honorary degree.

May 16
USF named Elizabeth B. Davis dean of the School of Management, the first female dean in that school’s 89-year history. Davis served most recently as dean of the University of New Haven College of Business, has 25 years of experience in higher education, and was also a business executive and CEO.

July 1
J. Robert Spatig began as USF’s new vice provost for strategic enrollment management. He previously served as assistant vice president for admissions, recruitment, and enrollment planning at the University of South Florida, and he was an active member of the enrollment management teams at the University of Georgia and Northeastern University.

September 28–29
USF welcomed its largest gathering of alumni and supporters to campus since the university’s 150-year anniversary celebration in 2005. Former Dons celebrated Alumni Weekend with more than 15 events, including a barbecue under the spires of St. Ignatius Church, networking mixers and cultural events for African American, Asian Pacific Islander, and Latino alumni, as well as performances by the USF Marching Band and Spirit Squad, historical tours, and professional talks by successful alumni and USF professors and deans. On Saturday, USF President Paul J. Fitzgerald, S.J., celebrated a special alumni Mass and made his first public address to graduates about his vision for the university.

October 24–25
USF welcomed a record number of parents and family members to campus over the weekend, where they toured the John L. Schiavo, S.J. Center for Science and Innovation, heard tips on how to navigate San Francisco’s challenging apartment rental market, and learned about career counseling and study abroad classes available to students. It was all part of the university’s Parents and Family Weekend, which drew about 1,300 individuals, a robust increase over the 850 attendees in 2013.

November 1
More than 1,000 people attended the installation ceremony of Paul J. Fitzgerald, S.J., the 28th president of the University of San Francisco, following three days of inaugural celebrations to honor the achievements of USF students, faculty, staff, and alumni. Speaking at the installation ceremony were Janet Napolitano, President of the University of California; Congresswoman Nancy Pelosi, House Democratic Leader; Gavin Newsom, Lieutenant Governor of California; Sister Genevieve Médevielle, past Rector, Institute Catholique de Paris; Willie Brown, former Mayor of San Francisco; Michael Weiler, S.J., Provincial of the California Province of the Society of Jesus; Michael Sheeran, S.J., President of the Jesuit Colleges and Universities in the United States; and the Most Reverend Robert W. McElroy, Auxiliary Archbishop of San Francisco. Also in attendance were USF trustees, emeriti trustees, members of the leadership team, student body officers, and many other students, faculty, staff, alumni, and members of the USF community. USF Board of Trustee Chair Thomas E. Malloy ’61 bestowed on Fr. Fitzgerald the presidential medallion of office inscribed with USF’s seal, and he then presented Fr. Fitzgerald with the university’s 1859 charter from the California Board of Education. Fr. Fitzgerald thanked USF’s trustees for selecting him as the university’s 28th president and reflected on the university’s role in one of the country’s most diverse cities and in the international community. One of USF’s strengths, he said, is its diversity, with students, faculty, and staff hailing from more than 70 nations. All come from different backgrounds, cultures, and traditions, but share the university’s Jesuit mission. Fr. Fitzgerald noted, “What I have found here at USF is that we have achieved a centered diversity, and we have embraced inclusive excellence such that we are able to educate and graduate global citizens with Baccalaureate, Masters and Doctoral preparation to change the world from here by changing healthcare for the better, assuring greater food security for the hungry, mapping out sustainable manufacturing, designing and building affordable housing, providing enlightening education, infusing ethics into the world’s financial systems, and constructing peace within and between the nations by building up faithful communities of justice and mercy.”

November 18
The USF community joined St. Ignatius Church parishioners and San Francisco residents on November 16 to commemorate the 25th anniversary of the killing of six Jesuit priests, their housekeeper, and her daughter, in El Salvador. The priests were murdered in a violent raid at their residence in 1989, for standing in solidarity with the Salvadoran people and opposing the country’s military dictatorship. About 700 people attended evening Mass at St. Ignatius Church on Saturday, which honored the slain Jesuits. Mass was followed by a documentary movie screening at the McLaren Conference Center about El Salvador’s 12-year civil war. Attendees joined a candlelight procession to the top of Lone Mountain and staked crosses into the ground around the Martín-Baró Garden, each bearing a victims’ name. USF President Paul J. Fitzgerald, S.J., offered a prayer.

December 4
USF’s long-standing commitment to social justice in the local and global community was recognized by the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, which renewed USF’s classification as a Community Engaged institution, first attained in 2006. USF’s community engaged classification was renewed until 2025, because the institution “documented excellent alignment among campus mission, culture, leadership, resources, and practices that support dynamic and noteworthy community engagement, and it responded to the classification framework with both descriptions and examples of exemplary institutionalized practices of community engagement. The application also documented evidence of community engagement in a coherent and compelling response to the framework’s inquiry.”

December 7
The University of San Francisco was named to the President’s Higher Education Community Service Honor Roll for the eighth straight year by the Corporation for National and Community Service. In 2014, USF made the honor roll in two categories: general community service and education. This honor highlights USF students’ exemplary service on issues ranging from poverty and homelessness, to environmental justice. Honorees are chosen on the basis of the scope and impact of service projects, percentage of students participating in service activities, incentives for service, and the extent to which the school offers academic service-learning courses.

December 12
Graduation ceremonies were held at St. Ignatius Church to honor 467 undergraduates, 433 graduate students, and 38 doctoral candidates. Among the commencement speakers were actor, activist, and native San Franciscan Danny Glover, whose films included the Oscar-nominated The Color Purple and the Lethal Weapon series. He is also known for his activism on behalf of underserved communities in the U.S. and his international humanitarian work. Glover was awarded an honorary degree during the College of Arts and Sciences ceremony. Former Haiti Prime MinisterMichèle Duvivier Pierre-Louis spoke to graduates of the School of Education and the School of Nursing and Health Professions. Pierre-Louis also received an honorary doctorate. She was Haiti’s second female prime minister and now heads the Knowledge and Freedom Foundation, an international nonprofit that supports education, economic development, and the spread of democratic values. The School of Management awarded an honorary degree to Adobe co-founder Charles Geschke, who was USF’s inaugural Rev. P. Carlo Rossi, S.J. Entrepreneurial Chair and is Chair Emeritus of the USF Board of Trustees. The ceremony also featured as a speaker tech entrepreneur Alfred Chuang ’82. Chuang, a USF trustee emeritus, is the founder and CEO of Magnet Systems, a startup offering a cloud-based platform for building mobile apps.

December 19
Thomas E. Malloy, class of 1961 and Chairman of the USF Board of Trustees, and his wife, Sharon Malloy, pledged $5 million to support USF’s legendary basketball program as part of a capital campaign. The gift is part of a university-wide comprehensive campaign currently in its quiet phase.
Dru Bhattacharya, Director of the MPH Program and Associate Professor, School of Nursing and Health Professions, has been named the 2014 recipient of the Early Career Award for Excellence in Public Health Law from the American Public Health Association’s (APHA) Law Section. The award is given annually to an individual who demonstrates great promise as a future leader in the field of public health law. The individual’s major contributions to the field should include research, teaching and mentoring, practice, and advocacy. The award was presented to Professor Bhattacharya at the APHA Annual Meeting on November 17 in New Orleans.

Megan Bolitho, Assistant Professor, Chemistry, College of Arts and Sciences, has been awarded a two-year grant from the Research Corporation for Science Advancement. The grant, the Single Investigator Cottrell College Science Award, provides $35,000 to faculty in the first three years of his or her academic career. This grant is centered around quorum sensing (QS), a means of communication utilized by bacterial cells to coordinate group behaviors. Because virulence is often a QS-controlled behavior, QS inhibition has the potential to mitigate disease caused by bacterial pathogens that communicate in this way. Small molecule inhibitors will be developed through both rational design (organic synthesis) and computational screening methods.

Wanda Borges, Associate Dean and Marie-Claude Couture, Assistant Professor, School of Nursing and Health Professions were awarded a $46,000 one-year grant to support promotion of the “Flu Near You” initiative by the Skoll Foundation.

Wanda Borges, Associate Dean, Nancy Green, Assistant Professor, and Jessie Jones-Bell, Adjunct Professor, - School of Nursing and Health Professions, have received a one-year $44,397 grant from the Gordon and Betty Moore Foundation. The award will support “Advancing the Policy and Regulatory Considerations for Nurse Residencies and Transition to Practice Programs: A National Dialogue” – convening a national forum of nursing leadership in practice and education to begin to address policy and regulatory issues in the field. The grant was awarded through the foundation’s Betty Irene Moore Nursing Initiative’s Spotlight on Success Grant Program.

William Bosl, Assistant Professor, School of Nursing and Health Professions, received an award for $26,286 from St. Peter’s University Hospital for a project entitled “Piloting Electrophysiological biomarkers for autism spectrum disorders (ASD) and related disorders in premature and low birth weight (LBW) infants.” A total award of $56,115 is anticipated by the second year of the project. Dr. Bosl is Co-Principal Investigator and is responsible for the project design, analysis of EEG data, and mapping of EEG features to behavioral measures of cognitive development. The goal of the project is to find early clinically useful brain-based markers of emerging neurodevelopmental disorders in premature and LBW infants, who are at higher risk for developing autism spectrum disorders and other cognitive disorders. The grant is funded by the New Jersey Governor’s Council for Medical Research and Treatment of Autism.

Rachel Brahinsky, Faculty Director, Graduate Program in Urban Affairs, College of Arts and Sciences, presented the talk “Whither Left Coast Progressivism?” at the European Urban Research Association City Futures III conference in June in Paris.

Richard Callahan, Associate Professor, School of Management, has been awarded a $22,000 grant from the Sierra health Foundation as part of a $160,000 grant, the be co-director of their upcoming Leadership Program. He will direct the design and deliver the program with Dr. Kenneth Kizer, Director of the Institute for Population Health Improvement and Pressor in the Medical School of the University of California, Davis.

Gretchen Coffman, Assistant Professor, Environmental Sciences, College of Arts and Sciences, was awarded a one-year grant from the National Geographic Society for her project “Restoration of Critically Endangered Cypress Trees of Laos” in the amount of $19,532. The grant will support her team of international researchers and USF students. They will locate living stands of cypress within a national protected area in Laos and collect seeds to propagate the trees and restore wetland ecosystems. The team will work with wildlife protection authorities and villagers to educate them about the value of conserving these trees for their nation.
Kathleen Coll, Assistant Professor; Politics, College of Arts and Sciences, presented the talk “Steps Towards Realizing Democracy’s Promise: Immigrants Voting Rights in the U.S” at the European Urban Research Association City Futures III conference in June in Paris.

Janice Dirden-Cook and Darlene Conwell, School of Education, were awarded two Upward Bound Math and Science Grants from the U.S. Department of Education. The grants, which total more than $2.5 million over the next five years, will support college preparation services for 113 low-income students from seven San Francisco schools who plan college majors and careers in the STEM field.

Joshua Davis, Professor and Associate Dean, School of Law, presented “Ascertaintainability and Uninjured Class Members as Growing Threats to Class Certification,” at the Impact Fund’s 12th Annual Class Action Conference in Oakland. He presented his paper “Legal Dualism and Legal Ethics” at the International Legal Ethics Conference in London. He also published “Class wide Recoveries” and “The Puzzle of Class Actions with Uninjured Members” in the George Washington Law Review. He was honored with the Antitrust Writing Award from George Washington University Law School for his article “Defying Conventional Wisdom: The Case for Private Antitrust Enforcement,” which won in the Academic category, Private Enforcement section.

Rodney Fong, Co-Director Academic Support, School of Law, presented “Lunch Round-We Know What Makes a Good Lawyer,” at the University of Denver Sturm College of Law’s SALT/Denver Law Pipeline Conference. He was a panelist on “Examining and Commemorating Brown v. Board and the Civil Rights Act” at the American Bar Association’s 2014 Center for Racial and Ethnic Diversity.

David Franklyn, Professor, Director of the LLM program in IP and Technology Law, and Director of the McCarthy Institute for IP and Technology Law, published “Trademark as Search-Engine Keywords: Who, What, When?” and “Trademark Surveys: An Undulating Path” in the Texas Law Review.

Deborah M. Hussey Freeland, Associate Professor; School of Law, wrote “Recovering the Lost Lawyer” in Professional Lawyer.

Dellanira Garcia, Assistant Professor, PsyD Program, School of Nursing and Health Professions, was awarded a National Institutes of Health Loan Repayment Program Award for her continued work on health disparities among Latino populations. This is a two-year award, and its objective is the recruitment and retention of qualified health professionals whose research focuses on minority health disparities or other health disparities.

Tristin Green, Professor, School of Law, presented “Discrimination Laundering: The Rise of Organizational Innocence and the Future of Equal Opportunity Law,” at Seattle University School of Law, and “America is From Venus, France is From Mars: A Transnational Perspective on Harassment Law,” at the AALS Workshop on Transnational Perspectives for Equality Law in Washington D.C.

Dave Griffis, Adjunct Professor, School of Management, has been selected as one of Kappa Alpha Theta Fraternity’s Outstanding Faculty Members for the 2013-2014 academic year. Over 110 applications were received from chapters across the United States and Canada. David was nominated because of his passion for inspiring students and actions that connect to the fraternity’s values of intellectual curiosity, leadership potential, commitment to service, and personal excellence.

Peter Jan Honigsberg, Professor, School of Law, was awarded $57,967 from The Anita Roddick Foundation to continue the activities of his Witness to Guantanamo project. The purpose of the grant is to film full-length interviews with former Guantanamo detainees and others involved in the prison in Guantanamo Bay, Cuba; as well as to preserve, edit, transcribe and post interview clips on its website, witnesstoguantanamo.com. The project has currently filmed interviews with 121 people in 18 countries.

Grace Hum, Assistant Professor; School of Law, spoke about “Turning up the Value of Guest Speakers in Skills-Based Upper Division Classes,” at the University of Nevada Las Vegas School of Law’s 14th Annual Rocky Mountain Legal Writing Conference. She also presented “A Starter Kit for Teaching Transactional Skills,” at Emory Law School’s Educating the Transactional Lawyer of Tomorrow conference in Atlanta, Georgia.
Tim Iglesias, Professor, School of Law, authored "Defining ‘Family’ for Zoning: Contemporary Policy Challenges, Legal Limits and Options," in Zoning and Planning Law Report. He filed an amicus brief on behalf of USF’s Leo T. McCarthy Center for Public Service and the Common Good with the California Supreme Court, in California Building Industry Association v. City of San Jose, addressing the review of challenges to an inclusionary zoning ordinance. He wrote a blog, “Utility Air Regulatory Group v. EPA: Little Impact on EPA Regulation of Greenhouse Gases,” for the Center for Progressive Reform.

Rosa Jimenez, Assistant Professor, School of Education, received a 2014-2015 National Academy of Education/Spencer Postdoctoral Fellowship award in the amount of $55,000. This year 25 fellows were selected from a competitive pool of 365 applications from scholars of education.

Jessie Jones-Bell, Adjunct Faculty and Program Coordinator for the RN Transition to Practice Program, received a grant award of $99,992 from the Kaiser Permanente Northern California Fund for Health Education. This was the fourth award from Kaiser funding to support the New RN Transition to Practice Program in Community Settings. The grant will support two cohorts of New Graduate RNs interested in developing their professional role as a new RN in community based settings.

Deneb Karentz, Professor, Biology and Environmental Science, College of Arts and Sciences, received an NSF grant for $229,625 for "Collaborative Research: Functional Genomics and Physiological Ecology of Seasonal Succession in Antarctic Phytoplankton: Adaptations to Light and Temperature." This project will investigate the genomic basis of the physiological and ecological transition of Antarctic marine phytoplankton from a cold dark winter to a warmer, brighter spring. During a field season, functional genomics and in situ fluorometry will be integrated with classical ecological methods to investigate photosynthetic adaptation that occurs during phytoplankton species succession. She is collaborating with the Desert Research Institute (DRI) in Nevada. On April 2014, she was awarded a supplemental fund of $8,588 from the NSF to enable her to attend the 2014 and 2015 meetings of the Committee on Environmental Protection as a private sector advisor to the US government delegation. The CEP is an advisory group to the Environmental Protection as a private sector advisor to the US government delegation. The CEP is an advisory group to the Environmental Protection as a private sector advisor to the US government delegation.

Leslie King, Professor, School of Law, has been awarded the first year of funding through a sub award from the University of California, San Francisco. She will receive $56,275 over a three-year period for her participation on an NIH grant entitled the "Economic Impact of Tobacco Taxes in the African American Community."

Alice Kaswan, Professor, School of Law, presented “Seven Principles for Equitable Climate Adaptation” at the University of Arizona College of Law, the Law & Society Association’s Annual Meeting, and the Association of Law, Property, and Society’s Annual Conference. She spoke about “Climate Adaptation and Land-Use Governance: The Vertical Axis,” at Columbia University’s Columbia Journal of Environmental Law Climate Change Symposium in New York. She presented “The Supreme Court and the Planet,” at the Bar Association of San Francisco. Her article “Climate Change and Environmental Justice: Lessons from the California Lawsuits” was published in The San Diego Journal of Climate Energy and Law. In partnership with the Environmental Law Society and two USF School of Law departments, she hosted the first annual Environmental Law Student-Alumni-Faculty Mixer.

Courtney Keeler, Faculty, School of Nursing and Health Professions, has been awarded the first year of funding through a sub award from the University of California, San Francisco. She will receive $56,275 over a three-year period for her participation on an NIH grant entitled the "Economic Impact of Tobacco Taxes in the African American Community."

Richard Leo, Professor, School of Law, was granted a fellowship at Stanford University’s Center for the Advanced Study in the Behavioral Sciences. He authored four articles recently: "The Sound of Silence: Miranda Waivers, Selective Literalism and Social Context," in Lawrence Solan, Janet Ainsworth, & Roger Shuy, eds., Speaking of Language and Law; "The Problem of Interrogation-Induced False Confession: Sources of Failure in Prevention and Detection," in the Handbook.

Helen Maniates, Assistant Professor, School of Education, won the Education Partner Award in May from the nonprofit Mo’ Magic, which provides early intervention program for at-risk children. Maniates and her USF reading-specialist students provide summer reading to Mo’ Magic children.

Keally McBride, Associate Professor, Politics, College of Arts and Sciences, was a panelist at the European Urban Research Association City Futures III conference in June in Paris.

Janice Mirikitani, USF Diversity Scholar and Visiting Professor, presented her poetry from her latest book, Out of the Dust, and reflected on her career and life-long legacy of social justice work in the heart of San Francisco at The Power of Human Connection presentation in October 2014.

John Nelson, Professor, Theology and Religious Studies, College of Arts and Sciences, won the 2014 Toshihide Numata Book Prize for Experimental Buddhism: Innovation and Activism in Contemporary Japan (University of Hawaii Press, 2013). The Toshihide Numata Book Prize in Buddhism is awarded by The Center for Buddhist Studies at the University of California, Berkeley, on an annual basis to an outstanding book or book in the area of Buddhist studies. Professor Nelson was presented with the Toshihide Numata Book Prize on November 14, 2014, at the Jodo Shinshu Center in Berkeley.

Maria Ontiveros, Professor, School of Law, authored “Migrant Labour in the United States: Working Beneath the Floor for Free Labour?” in Migrants at Work: Immigration and Vulnerability in Labour Law.

Terence Patterson, Professor, Counseling Psychology, School of Education, was elected chair of the San Francisco Mental Health Board. The Mental Health Board represents and ensures the inclusion of the diverse voices of consumers, citizens, and stakeholders in advising how mental health services are administered and provided. Dr. Patterson was also re-appointed to a three-year term on the California Psychological Association Ethics Committee, which serves as a resource to psychologists throughout California on ethical issues.

Stephen A. Privett, S.J., Former President was named Most Admired CEO of the year by the San Francisco Business Times. Fr. Privett was selected in the “large nonprofit” category for his commitment to innovation and dedication to the local community. As president, he established new campuses in downtown San Francisco, San Jose, and Sacramento; created the California Prize for Service and the Common Good to honor California leaders who give back to the less fortunate; and oversaw a 38 percent growth in total student enrollment, while recruiting students with the highest grade point averages and test scores in the university’s history.

Dean Rader, Professor, English, College of Arts and Sciences, edited the book 99 Poems for the 99 Percent, a new collection of poems by current and past poets. The collection climbed to No. 1 on the Small Press Distribution Poetry Bestsellers list in September.

Anthony Ribera, Professor, School of Management, spoke about the importance of ethical leadership and service during his keynote speech at the annual Pearls in Policing conference in mid-June.

Sami Rollins, Associate Professor, Computer Sciences, College of Arts and Sciences, has been awarded a $10,000 grant from the National Science Foundation to support students at U.S. institutions who attended the 4th Networking Women (N2Women) Workshop. The conference was held at the ACM Special Interest Group on Data Communication in Chicago in August 2014. Student participants consisted of underrepresented graduate students who were exposed to state-of-the-art research and had the opportunity to interact with leading researchers and fellow graduate students. She also has a three-year NSF grant of $179,863 for a project to encourage broader adoption of renewable energy sources, which is key to minimizing dependence on the electric grid and fossil fuels. The project will provide an improved understanding of energy consumption and generation in homes, particularly green homes. Dr. Rollins, along with her collaborator, Dr. Nilanjan Banerjee, at the University of Arkansas, will conduct a broad study of 15 homes which are both grid-tied and off-grid, and powered by a variety of renewable sources. They will study energy generation and how it is consumed and conduct research critical to encouraging the adoption of more environmentally responsible practices in the home.

Tanu Sankalia, Associate Professor, Urban Studies, College of Arts and Sciences, was a panelist at the European Urban Research Association City Futures III conference in June in Paris.
Mary Seed, Professor, Jessie Jones-Bell, Adjunct Professor, and Cathryn Halford, Adjunct Professor, School of Nursing and Health Professions, received a one-year $44,537 grant from the Gordon and Betty Moore Foundation. The award will support the Ambulatory Care Training Institute, which will provide a toolkit for and consultation to other schools to develop transition-to-practice programs for new graduates. The Institute will also provide assistance for revising curricula to include content and clinical experiences in non-traditional settings. The grant was awarded through the foundation’s Betty Irene Moore Nursing Initiative’s Spotlight on Success Grant Program.

Juliet V. Spencer, Professor of Biology, College of Arts and Sciences, was awarded a three-year NIH grant in the amount of $424,783. With funds from the NIH grant, Dr. Spencer and her student researchers will be studying the molecular interactions between human cytomegalovirus (HCMV) and the immune system. This will aid in the future development of an HCMV vaccine and could also identify new anti-viral drug targets. This is Dr. Spencer’s fourth consecutive NIH grant. She also received a $300,000 grant from the Avon Foundation for Women to research this topic.

Quayshawn Spencer, Assistant Professor, Philosophy, College of Arts and Sciences, has received a $21,514 grant from the National Science Foundation to support “The Race Debate...from Philosophy to Biomedical Research,” a one-day conference that will enable philosophers of race to have an extended conversation with biomedical researchers. A novel strategy will be implemented for promoting interaction by assigning particular positions to invited guests to argue for or against points of view. The guests will be comprised of racially and ethnically diverse participants and the conference was held at the University of San Francisco in Spring 2014.

Yaniv Stopnitzky, Assistant Professor, Economics, College of Arts and Sciences, received $99,999 from the BASIS project at the University of California, Davis, which is funded by the U.S. Agency for International Development. He and his colleagues from partner institutions—the University of Dar Es Salaam and the University of Alaska—will test a novel approach to improving the way that small-scale fisheries are managed. Over 18 months, the team will implement experimental games as a pedagogical tool for training individuals and communal organizations in how to participate effectively in local fishery management. The project will reduce overfishing and improve the well-being of the many fishing-dependent, rural communities in Tanzania.

John Sullivan, Professor of Biology, College of Arts and Sciences, received a two-year grant from the National Institutes of Health for $296,713. He is researching the disease schistosomiasis, which afflicts approximately 200 million persons in developing countries. The disease is caused by several species of schistosome blood flukes, which develop in compatible species of freshwater snails. Compatibility between schistosomes and their snail intermediate hosts is determined in part by the outcome of the interaction of the larval parasite with the host’s innate immune system, and in incompatible snails the larval schistosome parasites are attacked and killed by immune cells. As in other innate immune systems, that of the vector snail Biomphalaria glabrata is thought to rely on recognition of common pathogen-associated molecules by receptors on these immune cells. The specific aims of the proposed research are to identify one or more specific pathogen-associated molecules to which the innate immune system of B. glabrata responds, and then to characterize this response at the molecular level.

Aaron Hahn Tapper, Assistant Professor, Theology and Religious Studies, College of Arts and Sciences, received a 2013-2014 Fulbright Senior Scholar grant for research in Australia. He will cooperate with the Monash University and the University of Melbourne for his project, “The Apology and Comparative Forgiveness.” Professor Tapper’s primary focus will be to interpret how The Apology to the country’s Aboriginal communities, delivered in February 2008 by then-Prime Minister Kevin Rudd, affected them. Besides analyzing the meaning of forgiveness and determining whether change has occurred within the Australian society since February 2008, Tapper will apply this scenario to the larger framework of comparative forgiveness.

Sergio De La Torre, Assistant Professor, Art + Architecture, College of Arts and Sciences, received two new grants: $16K from the Warhol Foundation and $15K from the San Francisco Arts Commission to work as a curator on an exhibition called “La Fotografia en Mexico, 1996-2014” (working title). This project is an exhibition covering photographic practices in Mexico during the last 25 years. A catalog, with a historical survey of photography in Mexico, will accompany the exhibition. The exhibition will open in San Francisco at SF Camerawork in Spring 2015 and will travel to Arizona State University Art Museum in Summer 2015, Instituto Sonorense de Cultura in Fall 2015, and El Centro de la Imagen Mexico City in Spring 2015.

John Trasviña, Dean, School of Law, won the City of San Francisco’s 2014 Latino Heritage Education Award, which recognizes Latino leaders in arts, business, and education.

Michelle Travis, Professor, School of Law, had an article, “Disabling the Gender Pay Gap: Lessons from the Social Model of Disability” will be published in the Denver Law Review. She presented “Pregnancy Accommodation under the American with Disabilities Act Amendments Act,” at the Work and Family Researchers Network in New York.

Jennifer Turpin, Provost, was named by the San Francisco Business Times to the Most Influential Women in Bay Area Business list for 2011, 2012, 2013, and 2014, which recognizes 150 outstanding women professionals who make a difference in their companies, industries, and communities.
David Umansky, Assistant Professor, Mathematics, College of Arts and Sciences, received an NSF grant for three years for $149,994 for his project “Dynamics and Pattern Formation of Non-local Collective Motion and Assembly.” This is a Research for Undergraduate Institutions (RUI) award in partnership with Dr. James von Brecht at UCLA. Professors Umansky and von Brecht will be studying pattern formation and related phenomena that occur in systems with a large number of “particles” driven by non-local collective motion laws. The math of these particle systems has relevance for many disciplines, appearing in models in physics, chemistry, and biology. Two undergraduate students will contribute to the research and participate in summer study at UCLA.

Roberto Gutiérrez Varea, Associate Professor, Performing Arts and Social Justice, received the Spirit of Place Award for arts and social justice from the Orlando Latin American Film Festival for his documentary, “Acting Together on the World Stage,” which featured his work and that of others from around the world who do performances in the context of violent conflict and social justice.

Manuel Vargas, Professor, Philosophy, School of Arts and Sciences, authored “Neuroscience and the Exaggerated Death of Responsibility,” in The Philosophers’ Magazine.

Connie De La Vega, Professor and Academic Director of International Programs, School of Law, submitted an amicus brief to the U.S. Supreme Court in Hill v. U.S.A. The brief was on behalf of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights regarding the international standards for imposing juvenile life sentences without parole. She presented “Protecting Women’s Rights: Training in Human Rights Law and Advocacy,” at UC Hastings College of the Law’s United Nations Human Rights Mechanisms in San Francisco. She submitted a report on the United States to the U.N. Committee on the Elimination of Racial Discrimination on behalf of Human Rights Advocates, the USF Center for Justice and Global Justice, and to the Rocky Mountain Collective on Race, Place, and Law.

Aparna Venkatesan, Associate Professor, Physics And Astronomy, College of Arts and Sciences, is part of a three-year collaborative grant for $437,883 that was funded by the National Science Foundation to support the Undergraduate ALFALFA Team (UAT) project. Led by Professor Rebecca Koopmann at Union College, the UAT is a consortium of 19 undergraduate-focused institutions across the United States, of which USF is one of the newest members. This NSF-funded work with UAT will provide Prof. Venkatesan and USF undergraduates with hands-on observing and data analysis experience at a world-class observing facility through annual workshops, involvement in a summer research program, opportunities to network and present results at national meetings, computer support for data analysis and remote observing, and cutting-edge collaborative research projects. Three USF physics major/astrophysics minor students have participated to date in ALFALFA research and activities. Christopher Downing (Class of 2013) and Haley Sharp (Class of 2012), and a third student, Long Yan Yung (Class of 2014), observed at Arecibo Observatory in January 2013 with Prof. Venkatesan. Dr. Venkatesan was selected as a 2012 Dean’s Scholar recipient in large part for her contributions in theoretical cosmology. Her work is currently being used by others to help detect the first sources of light in the universe and to understand the physical conditions in primordial galaxies.

Mary Wardell-Ghirarduzzi, Vice Provost for diversity engagement and community outreach, was named a San Francisco Human Rights Commission Hero Award winner. The award came after Mayor Ed Lee appointed Wardell-Ghirarduzzi to the San Francisco Library Commission. Dr. Wardell-Ghirarduzzi was chosen as a Hero for her outstanding leadership in human rights advocacy, according to the Human Rights Commission.

Peter Williamson, Assistant Professor, School of Education, has been awarded the third year of funding for the Transition to Teaching grant which will total $2,451,961 for five years. This Department of Education grant supports the goals of the San Francisco Teacher Residency program (SFTR). SFTR is a partnership among USF, Stanford University, the San Francisco Unified School District, the United Educators of San Francisco, and the San Francisco Education Fund. Through SFTR, more than 150 highly skilled teacher candidates will be recruited and prepared to teach in San Francisco’s public schools in high-need subject areas such as math, science, and bilingual education. The program integrates masters’ level courses with a year-long apprenticeship under the guidance of highly skilled demonstration teachers. The grant will support many of the fieldwork, induction, and research components of the program.

David Wolber, Professor, Computer Science, College of Arts and Sciences, was awarded an NSF grant entitled “Collaborative Research in Computational Thinking through Mobile Computing.” This collaborative project involves MIT, Wellesley College, the University of Massachusetts, Lowell and Trinity College, and is for three years in the amount of $565,836. USF’s award is for $94,839. The goal is to motivate more students to learn the fundamentals of computing by enabling them to build apps for phones and tablets. The project leverages App Inventor, a new visual programming tool for building mobile apps, and will focus on the creation of online, Khan Academy-like teaching resources. Additionally, he was awarded a $200,000 grant by the Keck Foundation to help further develop AppInventor and the Democratize Computing Lab at USF. Professor Wolber has received a host of awards, including a NSF grant, to support his groundbreaking research. His work is focused on bringing computing to the masses, educating all students about programming and computational thinking and using AppInventor and mobile devices as a platform. This grant will support his work to disseminate AppInventor as a “course in a box” that can be used at universities and high schools worldwide and refine the “App Inventor Gallery,” an open market akin to the App Store where educators and students can share their apps. This is being done in conjunction with MIT, where Professor Wolber will be spending part of his sabbatical next year.

Mary Kate Wood, Assistant Dean; and Jessie Jones-Bell, Adjunct Professor, School of Nursing and Health Professions, received a $97,600 grant from the Kaiser Permanente Northern California Fund for Health Education in September. The award will support the RN Community-Based Transition to Practice Program, which builds the capacity of community-based care providers by preparing newly graduated RNs to succeed in these unique settings.

Taymiya Zaman, Associate Professor, History, College of Arts and Sciences, won the prestigious Pushcart Prize for her short story, “Thirst,” a satirical look at the world of academia. Pushcart Prizes are awarded annually to the best work from small presses around the world.

John Zarobell, Assistant Professor, International Studies, College of Arts and Sciences, was a panelist at the European Urban Research Association City Futures III conference in June in Paris.

Desiree Zerquera, Assistant Professor, School of Education and Resident Directors Jason Pender, Elliot DeVore, and Kathleen Bailey have been awarded $1,500 to further develop an assessment project that will examine the experiences of students at USF and the effectiveness of the Student Housing and Residential Education (SHaRE) Community Development Model. This one-year grant has been awarded by NASPA Region VI - the Western Region of the Association of Student Affairs Administrators in Higher Education.

Alan Ziajka, Associate Vice Provost for Academic Affairs and University Historian, authored the book, Lighting the City, Changing the World: A History of the Sciences at the University of San Francisco. Written in conjunction with the first anniversary of the opening of the John Lo Schiavo, S.J. Center for Science and Innovation, the book traces the history of the science programs at USF from the 1860s through 2014. It focuses on the institution’s key science faculty members and students, and the teaching, learning, research, and innovations that contributed to the development of San Francisco, the nation, and the world.
